Chapter 1: Getting Started in Photoshop

1.1 Basic Concepts Most people start Photoshop with no experience. The program requires little to no skills and is fairly easy to learn. The first step is to create a new document.

1.2 Painting The most basic step in Photoshop is painting. Just press and hold the mouse button down and let go of the mouse when you're done painting. Once you've painted, resize it if necessary and move it where you want it. You can use the Move tool to create a new layer, and then you can move the object by painting again to place it. You can also move objects by dragging them with the Move tool or Object > Move. Select the object and click on the Move tool's icon. In the Move window, you can select the new layer for the object. You can use several options to resize objects. You can stretch or shrink an object by using the Magnify tool's Zoom tool or the Object > Zoom menu. You can also stretch or shrink an object by using the Rectangular Marquee tool and resizing it that way. You can use the Selection tool to select a portion of an object or text and then move it. You can also change the background of a document. Just double-click the background layer to select it. Then choose either a New Layer or Select > Same Background and press Enter to select the document's background or select a different one. You can create a new layer from the original background and then move and edit it using the layers for different backgrounds.

1.3 The Layers Panel The Layers panel gives you access to all the layers on your document. If you activate a layer and name it, you can see it labeled, or you can add text to it to make it visible. To name a layer, drag its name to the Layer box and then release

Molecular imaging of transcription-related properties of tumor with Gd-DOTA-P-Bz-RGD peptides. The increased demand for new imaging agents has driven pharmaceutical companies to develop peptides or peptidomimetic ligands as molecular probes. P-Bz-RGD peptides bind more avidly to integrin $\alpha\beta_3$ than to other integrins and are a promising new class of tumor targeting agents. In this study, we investigated the translational potential of P-Bz-RGD peptides for theranostics, and they can not only target tumor integrin $\alpha\beta_3$, but also actively identify tumor for thermal treatment. It had a better effect on preventing tumor metastasis, providing a new direction for tumor therapy. When we are talking about the highly elite group of quarterbacks, it's hard not to start talking about Tom Brady, Peyton Manning, Ben Roethlisberger, and Drew Brees. That is to say, the elite quarterback. The stars of the game. On the gridiron. The best of the best of quarterbacks to never get a Super Bowl ring and win the most Super Bowls for any player. Now let's talk about two other groups: the elite quarterbacks who have never won the Super Bowl and the elite quarterbacks who won the Super Bowl more than once. Who are the former elite quarterbacks? I mean, you could make the argument that Brady, Rodgers, and Brees all have the potential to be elite quarterbacks but never have had the level of dominance that they have had in the last five years. Those who are in the later category, though, are very different. I can think of only three quarterbacks who have been elite more than once but never won it all: 1. Joe Namath (3 times): Joe Namath was a quarterback and a Super Bowl MVP in New York in 1969. He's the only quarterback to do that. Namath also threw for 56 touchdowns and nine interceptions. He missed the 1970 season with a hip injury but still led the Jets to an NFL Championship in 1973 (playing in relief of Ken Stabler). 2. Fran Tarkenton (2 times): Fran Tarkenton played quarterback for the Minnesota Vikings in 1963, the Minnesota Vikings in 1968, and the St. Louis Cardinals in 1973 and 1974. Tarkenton has the distinction of being the only quarterback to win the Super Bowl at least twice with two different teams.

Describing the day he almost lost his life in a fiery plane crash as “just another day on the job”, a firefighter told a Bradford court he and his colleagues were made to sign a peace bond after clashing with an ambulance crew. Jonathan Owen, from the South Leeds fire station, is standing trial after he was caught drunk driving and smashing into a parked ambulance in May 2009. He is charged with 13 counts of causing a disturbance and one count of dangerous driving following an investigation into the crash. On the second day of trial, Mr Owen was banned from driving for three years but will not be made to sign the “peace bond”, ordered by Leeds magistrates' court in May 2010. Carlton for Men, an organisation for bikers and motorcyclists, is sponsoring the trial and organising an “all day celebration” for its members on the day of the trial, to take place in Bradford city centre. The judge, prosecutor and defendant will not appear as a part of the celebration. Members of the biker group have already pledged to drink “a ton of beer” in memory of Mr Owen. Evidence has been heard of the defendant breaking his driver's licence, smashing into the parked ambulance and then being caught after more than a mile of driving. The fireman who helped tackle the driver pleaded with the court to provide him with bail but was “effectively railroaded” into a conditional discharge. The court heard how the man told police he had fallen asleep at the wheel after drinking “three or four bottles of wine”. He claimed he had not realised he had crashed the ambulance until he felt the impact and had to call for help. On the second day of the trial, the firefighter's barrister, Philip Campbell QC, said that his client had been made to sign a peace bond by police. In full uniform, the firefighter was made to give a three-page sworn statement that he broke the peace bond, Mr Campbell said. Recording a finding of guilty to the 13 counts of causing a public disturbance, District Judge Rupa Schleicher QC sentenced the man to 12 months in prison, suspended for 12 months, and imposed a £100 victim surcharge. Mr Campbell said that “the force came out with substantial firearms and threatened to put the firefighter in jail”.
