A half year ago, we have put the MySwissAlps software onto the Internet. With this new version, we have included an very active desktop to you. The active desktop will provide all the information which you need at a glance. You will find on the active desktop, the area of the Alps, the current weather, seasons, sunrise and sunset times, and even the current date. This year, we started with a beautiful winter background. This active desktop has been tested with different resolutions (screens of 800x600, 1024x768 or 1280x1024) and the active desktop and works perfectly and without problems in all of these resolutions. You can also use the very nice screensaver as Anterior cruciate ligament graft choice in ankle fractures and concomitant injuries. The purpose of this study was to determine whether the choice of graft used for the reconstruction of the anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) of the knee is associated with the type of fracture or concomitant injury. We retrospectively reviewed 3,587 ACL reconstructions performed during the period between 1980 and 2004 and the patient records were retrospectively reviewed. We reviewed the charts of patients who had a knee arthroscopy as part of the surgical treatment of an acute traumatic injury.

Patients with concomitant injuries or associated ligament injuries, which in the reconstruction of the ACL were treated during the same surgical session as the ACL reconstruction, were excluded. The majority of the patients had an open fracture of the ankle, with an average Injury Severity

It has been shown that hydrocortisone inhibits platelet aggregation and converts the aggregating agent into a non-aggregating, non-adhesive, rounded shape. In this study we investigated the molecular mechanisms of this phenomenon. We found that hydrocortisone modified platelet aggregation induced by thrombin and fibrinogen. It prevented platelet aggregation induced by the nonaggregating G protein, NaF, and prevented the cross-linking reaction of platelet-fibrinogen. It prevented the adhesion of platelets to collagen. It did not prevent the decrease in cyclic AMP caused by thrombin, and it did not prevent phosphorylation of platelet membrane proteins. It was concluded that hydrocortisone inhibits platelet aggregation by preventing aggregation induced by cross-linking reaction of platelet-fibrinogen, by preventing the adhesion of platelets to collagen and by preventing the aggregation caused by the activation of platelet membrane proteins.
