    - Pretty addicting. I like how there are different activities, other players to be with, and so much to do. You can be playing it at home/work, in the car, or outside as you're walking around. By far one of the best JRPG's I've played in a long time....Expand To begin with, Elden Ring is a Dragon Quest. it is very close to the first Dragon Quest, the version I played the most. It should be mentioned that this can be addictive and difficult, especially in the beginning (6 hours of combat in the beginning can be too much) I did mention that this can be addicting, but I also believe it is because of the complex combat system. It is very much like Dragon Quest, except it has an online component. So, in the beginning, you'll be following a path of battle and experience the story as you go. Another nice thing about Elden Ring is that when you reach level 10, you gain the option to make a house. You'll be able to have multiple NPCs and rooms in your house, where you'll have another story to continue. Another point is that the story is quite well written. I've talked about this with many people, and most people who have played the game agree with me. However, most people did not notice that it was written quite well. The characters are just fine, and they're quite funny. It's one of the few games that actually makes me laugh out loud, which I feel is quite rare. And overall, the graphics are quite nice. I've not encountered any problems with the graphics, though I have seen people with the ability to make graphics of their own. The music is quite solid, though I've seen people with songs that they've composed. You get the option of mixing the sounds together, which is nice. Another good thing about Elden Ring is that the game can actually be played alone. That is one of the few games that can be played single player without suffering from it. It is a gem of a game.... bff6bb2d33

Dimension Dungeon (Level 9-20)An epic non-linear dungeon with a variety of stages where the goal is to reach the final boss, which is a playable character. This action RPG has a unique turn-based gameplay system for melee and magic-using classes that will demand much exploration. Dimension Campaign (Level 12-20)This action RPG has a story where the NPCs each have their own quests, so it is possible to experience a variety of stories. You can progress the story in any order you like. Dimension Dungeon Map (Level 11-20)A mini-map for your character, where you can find a variety of things that you can use in the main dungeons. Dimension Campaign Map (Level 5-12)A mini-map for the places you visit in the main campaign. Dimension Dungeon Map (Level 9-20)A mini-map for the main dungeons. Toilets If you wish to change outfits or take off your equipment, you will need to go to the toilet! This feature is implemented as a series of animations and changes your character's appearance. The places where you can change are limited to the main story. The toilets and their contents (equipment, stat changes, etc.) will be shared between all players. So if someone changes into a new outfit, you'll see it too. Walk speeds The character's movement speed is displayed as a line graph. If you compare the walking speed of your character with that of your opponents, you'll be able to get a sense of who's leading. Mounting And Dismounting After selecting the "Mount" button in the main menu, you can switch to a horse in an instant. Combat Skills Level 9-20: Weapon and Skill Use Depending on your class, you can use one of three types of weapons: melee weapons (including axes, hammers, maces, swords, and spears), sorcery (including bows, bazookas, and explosive traps), and spells. Weapons that use a special effect are numbered as such, e.g. (Weapon Number) - Destruction (Sorcery) - Blast. Raise EnemiesYou can use "Enemy Raise" to raise up a certain number of enemies. When you use it, use the number shown in the display when you press the buttons to make the attacks. Sorcery and Melee AttacksMagic and melee attacks are different due

>The number of children who are obese or have severe obesity increased significantly since 2000, and is now occurring at younger ages, while the rise of physical inactivity has also occurred, according to a new report from the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Study author Donald Berry, PhD, of the CDC's Division of Nutrition, Physical Activity and Obesity, noted that this spells a "dramatic change" in the diet and physical activity of children, including gradual changes in foods they eat, the types of sports and activities they engage in and the ways they go about their education and ordinary life. "Children aren't any different from adults," said Dr Berry. "We know that what children eat relates to how well they'll be able to function as teenagers, and as adults, their best chance to have a healthy weight and to maintain it is to eat well, be physically active and get plenty of sleep." According to the CDC data, last year, there were 15.6 million children living with obesity, with a 41% increase in obesity and a 46% increase in severe obesity among children ages 6-11 years in the past decade. The youngest children, ages 5 and under, are the least likely to be obese, while the prevalence of childhood obesity is highest among African-Americans, Hispanics and children living in a household earning less than 185% of the Federal Poverty Level. Despite some trends, Dr Berry noted that the rates of childhood obesity and severe obesity remain higher in black children than in other ethnic groups. What is truly disturbing, he added, is that rates of obesity in black children increased by 131% from 2000 to 2014 and that 40% of the rise in childhood obesity in that time is attributable to gains in obesity among black children ages 6 to 11 years. The 25-year CDC data reveal that the prevalence of weight-related physical inactivity - defined as being inactive for more than 11 hours per day or participating in inadequate levels of physical activity - has more than doubled among elementary school-aged children in that same time period. By 2007, 23% of children exercised for an hour or less a day, and nearly 40% reported being physically inactive for more than the recommended minimum of 2 hours each day. Dr Berry stressed the importance of ensuring that children can engage in their familiar recreational activities, sports, and school activities while also playing with their peers and developing friendships
