Anti-virus, malware and malware analysis solution. The Intellexer family of products for any other task is composed of 33 products. The Intellexer family of products allows a fast and comprehensive characterization of data and data objects as far as it is possible for the specification of technical relationships. Intellexer products solve problems in complex information areas like e.g. taxonomy of business documents, classification and similarity search of electronic data, assembly, synchronization of content data sources, retrieval of information or statistics of data. Intellexer products are ideal for any other task. For example, they are used in engineering, in textual form processing, in biology, and in telecommunications. The Intellexer products provide a solution for the problem of information overload and help in the process of data preprocessing. The solution includes the steps: 1. Categorization Categorization means the process of submitting the document or its extracts, searching for its similarities in the existing information sources, which are represented by the taxonomies, in order to find similar information, which was previously not found. The taxonomy is used to classify information and to record its uniqueness. 2. Parsing Parsing is the sequence of actions performed to extract the meaning of natural language, i.e. to decide the syntactic and semantic relations in the text. After parsing, the document or part of it is prepared for further processing. 3. Evaluation Evaluation is the decision about the quality of the document and information from it. It is performed on the basis of knowledge retrieved. 4. Processing Processing is the use of information for generating new information (processing data). The information includes analysis, transformation, verification and transformation of information as well as mass storage, archiving, and retrieval. The Intellexer products provide a solution for the problem of information overload and help in the process of data preprocessing.
