A French team, with the aid of volunteers from all over the world, have developed Liberation Wars: Russian Civil War 1904-1921, the real-time grand strategy game dedicated to the events of the Russian Civil War of the 1910s. They have completely redesigned the game engine to be more accurate, and have created a huge variety of historical facts, political choices and geopolitical events to design the most complete and accurate game of a civil war ever. This is Liberation Wars: Russian Civil War 1904-1921 for PC. "The Russians have done well all through the war, despite the German losses and little financial help from the Entente." - Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of the British Empire, in a telegram to the British Government regarding the outcome of the Russian Civil War The Great War (WW1) has broken the enemy front, and many fronts are in danger of collapse. Most of the combatants are exhausted and their leaders are faced with one of the most complex problems in the history: How to end the war? Many countries have secretly negotiated with the German allies: a new peace treaty will abolish all German occupation areas and their frontiers, including those to the south and east of the Volga. All German forces will be demobilized. The Emperor Wilhelm's Army will be let go of their recent conquests, and must be resupplied by their allies. Furthermore, all Russian prisoners will be repatriated, and all wounded soldiers will be transported to Allied Hospitals. The Allies, however, have serious concerns: while the Russian army has mostly recovered from the 1916 casualties, the Austrian army is still in disarray and the British army is facing a growing

REDS VERSUS WHITEVS The Russian Civil War is one of the biggest conflicts of the 20th century. Between 1917 and 1921, the Red Army and the White Army take the Russian land from the Baltic to the Pacific, with a long arc across Central Asia from the west to the eastern cities of Asia. In the end of the Great War, the Great Powers, having negotiated and signed the treaty of the Brest-Litovsk, show no more interest in the war. The victory on the field of battle is worthless. The implementation of the victory, which was about to become the leading duty of the next generation, is a matter of great political problems, and the consequences have to be negotiated by the democratic political system of the new State. The greatest obstacle is that it is immediately taken as an attack against the democratic system of the new State, and a reaction from the other side is inevitable. A political tug-of-war begins, with the participation of almost all the countries of Europe. The neutral nations, however, particularly the non-combatant populations, are not ready to take part. What follows is a world-wide civil war between the old and the new powers: in the middle of the new, they are crushed on the edge of the old. WHAT THE UPDATES BRING Major changes to the new rules system. The updated Feudal System: The feudal system is now more realistic and balanced than ever. New Resource and Population grid for all map sheets. New Improvements: A selection of new and updated techniques such as the Transfer of Weapons and Training. The revised map: All map sheets have been updated with new and more realistic placements of towns, rivers, railways, roads and so on. A tutorial system for all movements: The configuration of the new movement options is more intuitive than ever. All events now have a set of dates and if the player hasn't modified them he can modify them as he chooses by

What's new in Revolution Under Siege Gold:

Mines Russian hackers have allegedly managed to steal data from around the world's largest gold miner, AFSCME, and have even secretly gained access to the group's central data base under the cover of a Powerwall project for mining communities in Australia. The country's second-biggest union reportedly notified law enforcement on June 8, when it discovered the attempted breach, which exploited its systems in order to gain access to the dissemination center. AFSCME "confirms that, on the basis of an investigation conducted jointly with the U.S. Department of Justice, Russian government-affiliated group, the Main Intelligence Directorate of the General Staff of the Russian Armed Forces (GRU) committed the criminal attack against the union's information technology system," AFSCME said. "The hackers temporarily gained access to the system of the union's information technology service while the union was under a construction project," the statement added. Although the hackers stole only detailed information about the union's IT infrastructure, the union claimed that "they also have access to the union's central database," which is understandable, since many mining companies run on databases. Although no organization has claimed responsibility for the hack, the hackers' sophisticated exploits of the system could point to a hacktivist group. Hackers and cyber-criminals often use group identities to portray themselves as part of a larger, coordinated effort and in the case of this hacktivist, an organization that has historically been linked to hacking. On its website, StateTech, which has been claimed as an offshoot of the secretive NotPetya hackers, has published a screenshot showing how the password reset process works when a user is on the recall page and not after an actual user access request. In the screenshot obtained by Ars Technica, credit card data is actually visible in the password reset interface and this would indicate that the hackers managed to steal payment card data from AFSCME. As proof of their access, hackers also

The GAISH has represented individual homeowners in the foreclosure process and has also provided financial aid to victims of housing-related disasters. The GAISH claims that it no longer uses Safeway stores data for credit card purchases, but this development came prior to the hack of AFSCME, so it's still unclear how the hackers obtained the information.
