A mathematical model of the three-dimensional macro- and microcirculation of the liver parenchyma was elaborated on the basis of hydrodynamics. The same model was used for the study of the uniform filling of the liver and the propagation of the immune response by means of a network of the microcirculatory bed. The calculations were done on the computer using the QP2 -5601-04. The model is simpler than the same model in two-dimensional form and it is convenient for the qualitative and quantitative description of the systemic circulation and the process of immune response.--- address: - 'School of Management Science, Fudan University, Shanghai 200433, P.R.China' - '1.
