I am programming a class and I am confused whether my code is logically correct. I want to throw an exception from a function and catch the exception in another function, is that correct? Or did I do it wrong? class myclass{ public: void myFunction(){ if(something is true){ throw myexception; } else{ doSomething; } } private: void doSomething(){ doSomethingElse; } } int main(){ try{ myclass mc; mc.myFunction(); std::cout << c6a93da74d
