“A maximum of 20,000 km or 12,000 miles is allowed per charge, and the lifespan of the battery is 6 years,”, adds Sergio Carvalho, Business Development Manager at BMW Group, Automated Wireless E-Sys. “In addition, the E-sys system makes it possible to cover a distance in just 3.5 hours, which has no precedent. That is a huge advantage.”

Smartphones can now be installed on the BMW Smartphone Kit via Bluetooth and will then automatically and directly access in the BMW i NEXT functionality. If you have already installed the BMW Smartphone Kit you can make this automatic connection to your BMW e-Sys module using the BMW i NEXT functionality. “We’ve developed our own antenna and receiver solution that we’re using exclusively for the BMW E-Sys and integrating into the BMW i NEXT,”, says Alexander Kahlweit, Managing Director, BMW i Mobility Solutions. “Instead of connecting with all the smartphones in our family, our own system has its own completely unique antenna for reception and is able to distinguish individual smartphones. Thanks to that we’re not reliant on your operating system, and can offer our customers a completely uniform service for all smartphones in the same family.” I dont have mine any more (I only had it for maybe a month as we were going to Europe), but when I did it was a very easy system with just three buttons, a blue button for yes, red for no and a white button to delete the module. It was much like E-Sys except the codes were visible on the screen. But like others said, the programming interface could be more intuitive, but the 30 min coding time was fine. It was inexpensive as well.

The e-Sys is also integrated into the navigation system of the vehicle. The e-Sys module works as a side-arm braking component that works even with no road active assistance systems (as Car-Assist). The e-Sys will not work properly if the major assistance systems are deactivated. There are two types of e-Sys modules: the CB e-Sys and the CD e-Sys. The CB e-Sys operates via a CB unit located at the steering wheel.

The CD e-Sys operates via a CD unit positioned at the center console. A new module will be required to operate the CD unit at the center console. The system has been characterized by great performance in medium-sized trucks in port operations in Hong Kong and Macau and, as an implement that requires less maintenance and has a lower TCO, it has been extremely successful.

Towing e-Sys trailers around Hong Kong has proved that the truck responds positively to the new system, having proven its safety and performance. Its robustness and response to the drivers is outstanding. As we see truck helicopter in the world and the target of transporting wheeled container, it is a very important aspect of operation and management to provide a good service for the truck drivers. An e-Sys vehicle will always provide a better service and a better teamwork environment, which, in addition to the low cost, help increase the staff satisfaction. The truck thus required a more powerful engine for the course of the trip, giving a more powerful acceleration and braking. Alvaro Pereira, driving the truck e-Sys, even had the pleasure of meeting some of his drivers from HPI, during the trip. 5ec8ef588b
