The head of the Icelandic church has urged the country to ban all abortion, with the aim of stopping thousands of terminations. The national Lutheran church was founded in Iceland in 1944, and its leader, Ólafur Strarðin, said the country had become “a country of permissive abortion”. “We need to ban abortion entirely,” he said in a public address. “This is the only way to stop the culture of disposability in the country.” The statement was made at a public event called “The Right to Life”, where a doctor shared his experience of providing an abortion in a mosque. Iceland was the first country to legalise abortion when it was made legal in 1976, by which time there were 11,000 abortions a year, 90% of which were illegal. The law was reformed in 2005, with Iceland remaining the only Nordic country to have legalised abortion, and it has since remained legal, with the regulation of abortion by the health ministry. In 2013, the Icelandic Health Ministry published new guidelines that allow medical personnel to provide terminations if a woman’s life is in danger or 04aeff104c
