Q: Ruby on Rails - hash syntax I was wondering if someone could explain the magic of the hash notation in ruby. example: 1) puts @user.persons.first.first_name.include?(@phrase) => 0 2) puts @user.persons.first.name => nil 3) puts @user.person.where("first_name LIKE?", "nev").first.first_name.include?(@phrase) => 0 I don't understand why on #1 is 0 while on #3 is 1 A: The include? method works on arrays, hashes and strings; if you do something like: my_string = "Hello" my_array = ["My", "Name", "is", "John"] my_hash = {"First" => "Name", "Last" => "Is"} all 3 are true, because they all contain a substring of "Hello". The include? method is designed to support SQL queries, so if you look at the source code (Object#method_missing), you can see what is going on. It's a neat method, and can be useful in some circumstances
